FASHION AND GOSSIP.

Woman's Ways and What She Wears.

A Choice Collection of Toothsome Caramels.

For Ladies' Sunday Chewing.

Beecher wears a seal-skin overcoat. Queen Victoria walks with a cane. Oscar Wilde is about to be married. Washington Territory wants a woman governor.

Coat sleeves are much worn by editors this season. Fine handkerchiefs are bordered with chintilly lace.

Black jerseys are worn over skirts of black silk or Ottoman.

Nun's gray kid sandals with pale lilac silk stockings are pretty for house wear. "Kissed by Her Husband" is the title of a new book. It is perhaps a work of fiction.

Man wants but little here below; but woman wouldn't be satisfied if she had the earth.

The difference between Modjeska and Langtry is that one is a Pole and the other a stick.

Miss Anna Dickinson was furnished by General Butler with money to buy her stage outfit.

Elizabeth Amalia Eugene, Empress of Austria, is one of the cleverest horsewomen in Europe.

It is stated that many girls wear seal-skin acquies in order that they may eat all the ice cream they want.

Joking about her nose, a young lady said: "I had nothing to do with shaping it. It was a birthday present."

An ingenious young lady wants to know if Henry-on's "Galashad" is not the "girl he left behind him."

Long close-fitting cloaks, trimmed with five-inch bands of fur, are being made by the tailors for winter wear.

Poor little Lotta has been mercilessly teased in London in a way which shows that it was the result of a deliberate plan.

The most beautiful fabrics for the evening dress of the winter are the tulles and gauzes embroidered in gold and colors.

Paragaphists should be careful what they say of Sara Bernhardt. She strikes from the shoulder and she is coming to America.

Speaker Carlisle defers in everything to his talented and dignified wife, and gives her the credit for the success of his public career.

It is said that the kind mothers in the east are growing so affectionate that they give their children chloroform previous to whipping them.

"My dear," said a wife to a rich, illiterate husband, "I want $500." "What for?" he inquired. "Seal skin fur," she said, and she got it.

Henry Villard's daughter attended the opera in New York the other night wearing a white worsted breakfast shawl, and society was shocked.

Saskin jackets in the jersey style, but quite short and untrimmed, are more popular with young ladies than the long seal-skin saque of former years.

It is not the correct thing for a lady in inviting a gentleman to a leap year party, to call for the gentleman unless she is accompanied by a chaperon.

An eastern man recently applied for divorce, and in the complaint he alleged "scandalous treatment," an analysis of which proved that he meant tripe.

Rosa Bonheur, who is suffering from cancer, is reported to be somewhat better, and although her condition is still critical, there are hopes for her recovery.

Statistics compiled in Prussia show that triplets occur once in every 37,123 births. If the disease is ever transmitted to this country, there will be a stampede.

Mary Anderson's receipts in London have been greater than those of Irving in New York. Try he ever so much, Mr. Irving can never be so sweet as Mary.

Scarlet hoods for school are worn by children. They are lined with scarlet silk, and have large bows of ribbon on the top. Some have Mother Hubbard byms.

A young man in Kansas wanted to teach school, but couldn't tell horizontal from perpendicular, and when asked what a "circular" was, said it was a fur-lined cloak.

A woman may be perfectly angelic, and patient as patient can be, and still not be able to look calmly on while her husband draws a match along a picture frame to light his pipe.

One leap-year privilege which ladies will appreciate is that of going, in companies of two or more, to the opera or theatre without male escort—and paying for their own tickets. It is jolly, you know.

The wedding service has been so arranged that the bride responds to the usual questions after the groom has responded. So we see even in the outset of married life woman is bound to have the last word.

Very narrow bracelets are most fashionable, and these are not worn in pairs and to match, but are odd—that is, different on each arm—and a single bracelet is more stylish than the group of them worn when bangles were in vogue.

The "wishbone" wedding has become the correct thing. The couple stand beneath a floral wishbone. After the ceremony the bride and groom are given the wishbone to pull. The tug results in a break somewhere, and whoever holds the long piece is absolved from getting up to build fires in the morning.

Brown—"Confound it! Did you see me kiss the lady?"

Boy—"Well, I'm not stone blind."

Brown—"Here's fifty cents—you needn't say—"

Boy—"Oh, it's all right. I've made over ten dollars off of her this summer and fall."

This is the time of the year at which your mother-in-law becomes friendly, and sends a barrel of apples to you from the country, and a lot of butter rolled up in salted linen. This leads to a friendly correspondence and in two weeks the old lady comes down and settles for the winter, and expects you to take her to the theatre or the opera every night in the week.

Felt corduroy bonnets are a pretty novelty for mourning and traveling wear.

Seal-skin muffs are larger this season than last, and continue to increase in size.

Embroidery cut out and applied on woolen and silken stuffs will be much used.

Buds worn on hats here are very modest in size and color beside those worn by Parisian ladies.

Velvet is used for everything in Paris—dresses, cloaks, bonnets and even the trimmings of these bonnets.

Bands of velvet worn around the throat should be ornamented with a diamond crescent, a locket or some bit of jewelry in front.

Some of the most elegant evening dresses are in pale corn color, and are trimmed with clusters and wreaths of natural wheat.

Madame Minnie Hauk is said to be the first artist who has received the photograph of the Emperor of Germany with his autograph.

A deserted damsel rushed into a ball room at Alviso, Cal., the other night and threw a pan of molasses upon the shirt front of her faithless lover.

Those who make gifts of jewelry are advised that bracelets are at present the most popular piece of jewelry, just as lockets and necklaces were formerly.

Mrs. A. T. Stewart received a call from a tramp on Saturday, who asked her what she was going to give him for Christmas. She presented him to a policeman.

There are now ten lady clerks in the retail trade to one salesman.—Ex. Beg pardon, but don't you mean "gentleman clerk?" "Salesman" is so vulgar, you know.

The report telegraphed from London that Mary Anderson was engaged to the young Duke of Portland was erroneous. Only another advertising scheme of "Papa Griffin."

It is said that Henry Villard's palace will surpass the Vanderbilt mansions, and cost an even million. It is the first attempt made to reproduce an Italian palace in America.

The newest leather for pocket books, card cases, portfolios, traveling and shopping bags, and letter cases is darkly colored, and has pressed figures on it copied from old Spanish and Japanese leathers.

American Christmas cards rival the English cards in beauty of design and sentiment, and are so well executed that they are commended by European papers, and are largely exported, especially to London.

Mrs. McElroy, the President's sister, and Miss Susan B. Anthony were seen walking together in Washington the other day. The newspaper correspondents have not explained the meaning of this public exhibition as yet, but it is presumed that the President is about to commit matrimony.

Mr. Bouc'eault is said to be such an artist in cookery that he could give points to the best chefs in the country. Mr. Jefferson is very fond of griddle cakes; Savin, of macaroni; Catherine and Jeffreys Lewis, of Frankfurt sausage; and Patti has a weakness for onions—but the weakness is so strong.

Some very curiously worded advertisements creep into the newspapers now and then. Here, for instance, are two amusing examples of composition which an English traveler said he read in one issue of a London paper: "Lost—A camera brooch, representing Venus and Adonis whilst walking in Sandy Mount on Sunday last." "Wanted—A nurse for an infant between 25 and 30, a member of the Church of England and without followers."

When a stranger from the Wild West drops a quarter of a dollar into a church contribution box, all the unmarried sisters in the congregation immediately set their caps for him under the impression that he is a "Silver King."—Ex. And when one of the Eastern Millionaires comes away out here and drops in a lead 5-cent piece, with a noise like unto the falling of a 6-story building, the usher gives him one look of disgust and then hands him over to the police as a "Vag."

A TRUE STORY.

"And I say, John," said a clothing merchant to his bookkeeper, "when you get to those advertisements copy one for the Woman's Journal."

"But, sir," said John in amazement, "we don't keep any ladies' goods."

"Don't," said Well, young man, when you have been married so long as I have you'll discover that nine out of every ten married women wear the pants. You hear me!"

NO HAIR APPARENT.

"And so, my dear girl, you have got married. Is your husband handsome?"

"Like Apollo." "What eyes has he?"

"Like a falcon." "What kind of a nose?"

"Like an eagle." "What is the color of his hair?"

"Hair?" (hesitatingly) "Well, I'm sure, I don't know yet!" "What? you don't know?" (Embarrassed.) "He hasn't got any yet."

"Not got any yet?" "Why, you see, dear Rosa, his head is quite bald from overstudying, but he is rubbing it every day with a famous restorer, and it is sure to make its appearance very soon. I fancy it will be dark brown."

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

"Do you love me, dearest?"

These words were spoken by Algernon Montezburg, who held in his dainty little hand of Arethusa Clarendon, the only daughter of Squire Clarendon, of Clarendon Hall, Clarendonshire. Arethusa's shapely head drooped in maiden modesty, but it was for a moment only; instantly she raised her head, and looking the young man full in the face, she fervently replied:

"I do, Algernon, with all my heart."

"Thank you," Algernon replied: "of course it's flattering to know it. I only asked out of curiosity, you know."

Thus ended the love-dream of the fair Arethusa; but she makes no complaint; when the subject is mentioned, she merely says that she remained single from choice.—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Madison, of Cincinnati, rather than waste his time on tramps, feeds 500 spiders.

President Arthur doesn't believe we shall have elected a new President by next Christmas.

King Humbert is mad because the Crown Prince gave the Pope's hand a regular Flatbush.
